For every little bear
with a big feeling.

Fennel Bear had Mama all to himself,

for stories and snuggles
and books on the shelf.

Then home came a bundle
in a blanket of pink.

“Meet Baby Poppy!” said Mama. “What do you think?”

Everybody cooed, “Oh, look at her nose!

And look at those tiny, wee, wiggly toes!”

Mama held Poppy. Mama rocked Poppy.

Fennel stood by, feeling small and floppy.

Something green sprouted, tickly and tight.

A prickly green vine grew with all its might.

It curled round his tummy.
It crept up his chest.

“I’m jealous,” he whispered.

Mama Bear saw it. “Jealous is normal. I see you.

There’s room in my heart for Poppy and you.”

“First, SPOT it. Where does the green grow?

In your tummy? Your chest? Just let me know.”

“Next, ASK for what you need from me.

A hug? Some story time?
Just ask and you'll see."

“Last, JOIN in. Poppy’s learning, too.

Want to be the helper?
There’s lots you can do!”

So Fennel read Poppy a book, snug as a bug, and he gave Mama one extra-big hug.

Now when the green comes,
he knows what to do:

Spot it. Ask. Join. There's love enough for two.

Fennel's 3 Jealous Steps

1. SPOT IT

Where does the green grow?

2. ASK

Ask for a hug or some time.

3. JOIN

Help out. Play together.

There is love enough for two.

A Note for Grown-Ups

Name the feeling: “You feel jealous.”

Give a little one-on-one time.

Let your child help in small ways.

Say: “There is room in my heart for you both.”
